WHEELING, MARCH 21, 1894.

The Scandal of the Bill.

The finance committee hands the tariff bill over to the senate after six weeks of incubation. In these six weeks there has been persistent rigging of the stock market on information which must have come from the men who were doctoring the bill.

It cannot be said positively that these senators were using their opportunity to make deals in the market, although Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, has admitted that his brokers did buy sugar trust shares for him, which shares he ordered sold at a a loss.

There are other senators to be heard from who have voluntered no explanation. It is believed that some of them are interested with the whisky trust, which desires an increase in the internal tax on its product.

From the time the sub-committee got to work on the bill till now it has been the subject of scandal such as never before has been connected with the making of any tariff bill.

The powerful sugar trust has put its impress on the work of the senate finance committee, The Democratic opposition to trusts is only theoretical.

Turning Over a New Leaf.

Senator Blackburn's prominence at Mr. Moody's revival meetings in Washington and the understanding that he has determined to lead a religious life have furnished the wits an opportunity to say some things which they seem to think will be read with pleasure.

If the Kentucky senator has resolved on the course attributed to him he has done a sensible thing not to be treated lightly. Certainly the man who tries to prepare himself for right living and right dying is on the line of his highest duty to his God and his country, and the mind that can try to make fun of him is beneath contempt.

If all our public servants and all the people were God-fearing ours would be a very different country.

Odd Counterfeiting.

It is believed by secret service men that half a million bogus silver dollars are in circulation, the work of one gang. The dollars are bogus because they are not coined by the government, but they contain as much silver as the government puts in its dollars and yield a profit of fifty-one cents on each

Counterfeiting has an odd look when it comes in this guise, giving the same intrinsic value as the government give The outsiders pocket the "seigniorage" as the government does. If there were a dollar's worth of silver in the silver dollar there would be no profit in this operation and it would not attract out-

Redeeming the Democratic Pledge. Assuming that "the tariff is a tax" and that the consumer pays it, which is Democratic doctrine, the average per capita of this tax under the McKinley act is three dollars. Under the Wilson bill as it goes from the finance committee to the senate the average per capita will be fifty cents less. The difference and as much more revenue as may be required is to be made up by the increase of existing internal taxes and the imposition of new ones.

It is in this way that the Domocratic party carries out its pledge to reduce taxation and relieve the people of their burdens. This is one of the reasons why the people will grasp the first opportunity to relieve the Democratic party of the responsibility of power,

THE POWER OF VETO.

Proposed to Amend the Constitution to Give the President a Right to Disap-prove Bems in Approximation Bills, Washington, D. C., March 20.—The nestion of amending the constitution of the United States so as to give to the President the right to veto items of appropriation bills has long been one that many members of Congress have given considerable thought to. It is well known that frequently the chief executive finds provisions in these bills that are objectionable to him, yet rather than sacrifice the numerous items which would result from a veto, he which would result from a veto, he signs the bills and they become laws as a whole. Fruitiess efforts have been made in previous Congresses to remedy this unsatisfactory state of affairs, and in this Congress a similar attempt will be made. Representative DeArnold, of Missouri, has introduced in the house a resolution amending the constitution so as to empower the President to veto any one or more items of an appropria any one or more items of an appropria tion bill.

In speaking to a reporter about the amendment to-day Mr. Dearmond said:
"As all know, the President has the power of vetoing any bill passed by Congress and when he returns a bill without his approval the measure fails unless it mayer and house by a two-thirds. ss it passes each house by a two-thirds majority on a yea and may vote. Some bills, notably appropriation bills, em-brace a number of distinct items. No bills, notably appropriation bills, embrace a number of distinct items. No matter how grave the objections of the President to any one or more items, his only choice is between approval and disproval of the entire bill. By the proposed amendment, in case the President returned the bill to the house in which it originated with a statement of his objections to the items which he did not approve, the same course would be taken as if he had vetoed the entire bill. It has become quite the fashion in late years to load appropriation bills with all kinds of "riders." These appropiation bills must be passed or the wheels of the government would stop. Great inconvenience, even hardship, may result from a veto and yet the bill may contain items which have not in fact and ought not to have the presidential approval. With the constitution amended as suggested, the President would refer back to Congress the question of whether objectionable items should remain in the bill or 20 out of it. Choice between defeating a bill which must be passed on account of the necessary appropriations which it carries and passing a bill which on account of some of the grabs in it, ought not to be passed, is presented to the legislator. some of the grabs in it, ought not to be passed, is presented to the legislator before the bill reaches the President. If before the bill reaches the President. If the President had the power to veto items resting on extravagance or something worse, there would be less temptation to manacure and scheme to get such items into a bill. Provisions similar to those of the proposed amendment are found in some of the state constitutions, that of Missouri, for instance, and they have proved their worth wherever tried.

of Light, Water Works and Street Rait ways-Mr. Manderson on Record.

Washington, D. C., March 20.-Senstor Manderson has put himself on re-cord as being in favor of municipal ownership of street railways, lighting and water works. Addressing the annual meeting of the Washington congregational club upon "The good citi-zen in municipal affirs," the senator advocated a change in the present system of municipal government. It was unfair that in so many cases men controlled the funds of a municipality controlled the funds of a municipality who had no interests in its welfare and prosperity. Private corporations, he said, had no right to furnish light, water, or transportation for nunneignal purposes. If there was profit in conducting these enterprises the municipality should conduct them and reap the benefits, and it is the duty of good citizens to see that this was brought about. about.
